

High-Impact Discovery

- Retinal Prosthesis -

The Biomimetic MicroElectronic Systems Center (BMES) at USC – An external camera sends images to a microelectronic implant in the eye, which stimulates the retina of a blind person to provide a sense of vision. FDA approval was granted in 2013.

